HOMEOPATHY, PAST AND NOW.

State Society of the Little Pill Doctors in Session in Omaha.

STORY OF THE RISE OF THE SYSTEM.

Hohnemann, His Labors and Triumphs -His Nebraska Followers-Dr. Hanchett's Eloquent Address to the Body Last Night.

The first session of the annual meeting of the Nebraska Homeopathic Medical society was neld yesterday afternoon in the parlors of the Murray hotel. The officers of the soviety are: W. H. Hanchett, M. D., Omana, president; W. A. Humphrey, M. D., Plattsmouth, first vice president; D. E. Foristall, M. D., York, second vice president; W. E. Buck, M. D., Minden, secretary; O. S. Wood,

M. D., Omaha, treasurer. Homeopathy was founded by Friedrich Hahnemann. He was a celebrated physician, born in Meissen in Saxony, in 1755, graduating at Erlanger in 1779 and practicing for some years at Dresden. But his claim to renown rests largely, if not solely, upon his establishing the new system of medicine, which he announced about the year 1796. It Is not difficult to comprehend the great principle underlying his whole theory, it is this: In order to cure any disease, we should employ a medicine having power to produce a similar affection in the body of a healthy person, believing that an artificial affection (caused by the medicine) displaces the original disease and, on discontinuance of the medicine, this second disease ceases of itself. Hence the motto adopted by homeo pathists-"Similia similibus curantur'

From Germany homeopathy spread first over Europe, then over the United States, Its introduction into this country being in 1825. The honor of having first practiced this system of medicine in America belongs to Hans B. Gram, a native of Boston, He met with immediate success. Other met with immediate success. Other physicians of that city soon investigated the rules laid down by Hahnemann, all of which were considered by him as elementary: 1. The practicioner should ascertain the effect of medicinal substances upon persons

2. From the knowledge thus obtained he should select a remedy whose action corresponded with the symptoms of the patient under treatment. 3. He should give this remedy by itself

4. The dose should be so small as not to cause any general disturbance of the system, Its action being limited to that portion of the body which is in a morbid condition.

Naturally enough this was considered novel, but others in the United States beside Gram who had their attention attracted to these singular propositions, after a careful study of the new theory gave it their adherence, and entered upon the practice of homeo-pathy. They, too, were successful, and it was soon claimed that not only ordinary diseases could be properly treated, but epi-demics, usually fatal, yielded to homeopathic treatment. The system rapidly gained a prestige which neither "time nor dissention" could arrest or destroy.

The first practicing homeopathic physician In he first practicing nomeopathic physician in Nebraska was Dr. A. S. Wright. He came to Omaha in 1862, in October. He had previously practiced in Indianapolis, Ind. It was long before his professional labors were rewarded with sucprofessional labors were rewarded with suc-cess in this city. Here he remained until May, 1874, when, his health failing, he re-moved to Santa Rosa, Cala, where he still follows his calling. He was the sole repre-sentative of homeopathy in Nebraska until 1866. In May, 1868, Dr. W. H. H. Sisson from Massachusetts located in Omaha, fol-lowed during the next month he lowed during the next month by Dr. O. S. Wood from Philadelphia. The first named diea January 25, 1873, but Dr. Wood is still practicing in Omaha. The doctor opened his office on July 10, of the year of his coming, devoting himself steadily and successfully over since to his profession. He is senior member of the American institute of homeopathy and of the Medical association and Northwestern academy of medicine, and was a charter member of the Nebraska State

Homeopathic Medical society.

Of the early homeopathic practitioners who came to Omaha besides those aiready named we may mention Dr. W. J. Earhart and Dr. Massden, who came in 1869; Dr. F. Saxenberger, in 1871; Drs. F. Hoyt and James M. Borghem, in 1874; Drs. H. C. Jesson and H. A. Worley, in 1875; Dr. C. M. Dinsmoor, in 1875; John Ahmanson (established in Omaha as a physician), in 1879, and Drs. Willis B. Gifford and C. S. Hart, in

As early as September 2, 1873, the organization in Lincoln of the Nebraska State Homeopathic Medical society was perfected. Dr. E. T. M. Huribut was elected president; Drs. A. H. Wright and J. H. Way, vice presidents; Dr. A. C. Cowperthwait, secretary; Dr. O. S. Wood, treasurer, and Drs. W. A. Burr, J. H. Way, D. H. Casley, Emlen Lewis and A. S. Wright a board of censors. From its beginning in Nebraska homeopathy has been steadily gaining ground. At the any size that has not its homeopathic physi-clan or physicians in active practice.

At the afternoon session of the society the reports of the secretary and treasurer were Seven applications for membership Dr. Laura A. Edwards read a paper en-itled "Homeopathy." The report of a committee on by-laws and constitution was next read and commented on at some length, and the rest of the after noon session was taken up in the discussion of the reports of officers and board of censors.

At 8:30 p. m. the evening session was called to order and the president's address delivered. President Hanchett said:

"It is with sincere pleasure that the physicians of Omaha welcome the members and friends of this society to our city and it gives me great pleasure to believe that this will be a very satisfactory and profitable session. The progress of medicine, notwithstanding the testimony to the contrary of those who are profoundly wise in subjects of which they know nothing, has been great and we are today standing on

It must not astonish if often when some wave more vast than the rest and flashing fuller aplendor, shall have thrown far to land a single pearl, stolen in its leaping energy from unsuspected depth; a pearl which has both Orient and Occident hidden in its radiant completeness, a pearl which shall remind us of the richness of the conceased realm of

Such men as Jenner, Pas-teur and Koch demand attention and study, not derision which is never study. VINDICATED AT LAST.

Arrest of a Mail Robber Clears Up a Mystery.

BILLINGS, Mont., June 3 .- Through the Madden-McDermott feud in the Big Horn pasin of Wyoming a mystery of long standing here has been cleared up and the suspicion that has for three years hung over the name of George Swift of that place has been removed. McDermott, according to the story told by Madden, frequently robbed the mails, and one instance was given where he secured $120 from a registered letter sent from Billings. George Swift was the man who sent the money to Cassel George, and when the envelope which should have contained it reached its destination empty, the Billings man was accused of appropriating the money to his own use. Mr. Swift, though protesting his innocence was induced to make good to Cassel. cence, was induced to make good to Cassel George the amount of money missing, and has continued from that time to this in a position of trust with Barcock & Miles. But the unfortunate occurrence has never been forgotten by him nor the United States government and all those your the server ser. rorment, and all these years the secret service arm of the government has been exerted to clear up the mystery. Mr. Swift, with no premonition of the storm about to burst, and with the confidence of conscious integrity, enclosed the money, registered the letter and sent it on its way without taking the precaution inclosing the bills in the presence of wit-nesses. He had no proof that he had inclosed the money, and the consignee receiving an empty envelope, duly stamped and regis tered, naturally refused to accept the word o the cashier that the money had been inclosed

The work was finely done by the mall robber and it seemed a hopeless task for Mr. Swift to ever substantiate his claims and clear his

Plans Formulated for Organizing Lodges Throughout the West. TOPERA, Kan., June 3 .- The grand lodge of the Knights of Reciprocity, at last evening's session, amended the constitution and by-laws of the order. The obligations pubicly announced are an oath to support the constitution of the United States and work for reciprocity. Organizers will be sent out through the western states and the republican leaders will be asked to assist in establishing lodges. The plan for organization of lodges is practically the same as that of the citizens' and farmers' alliance. There will be a corps of lecturers and a "reciprocity songster." More than one hundred delegates representing 160 lodges are in the city and any republican leaders who have refused to join are here for the purpose of watching the organization. The membership of the order is now 20,000 in Kamas, while lodges have been established in Iowa, Nobraska and South Dakota. The knights are finding their bitterest opposition among the members of their own party, who oppose secret society work in politics as un-American. The old rowd of politicians, with the exception of congressman Peters, has refused to join. But the younger leaders are taking hold with enthusiasm and with the continued growth of the order it will be in a position to dictate party nominations in this state and to form Terrible Battle with a Beast to Save a Boy's Life.

RESCUED AFTER BEING BADLY HURT.

Superintendent Mostler of Atlanta's Park Injured in the Struggle with the Infuriated Animal-An Exciting Scene.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 3.-Superintendent ohn L. Mostler at Grant park had a terrible pattle with Molly, the Mexican lioness, yeserday. He was fighting for the life of In man Heil, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Bell, and a nephew of John H. Inman of New York. The little fellow and the superintendent were injured seriously. But for the coolness of Mostler the boy would have been horribly mangled by the sharp claws of the beast. As it was, the litle fellow was badiy scratched and bitten. Mr. Mostler had his right hand severely scerated. The fight for life was witnessed several people, among them the mother of the injured boy, and while the battle was being fought the most intense excitement was reated among the spectators. Molly, the ioness, is usually quiet and peaceable, this ging the first time she has ever shown such a bad disposition. Her attack was entirely unlooked for. It seems that Mrs. Bell, accompanied by ninan, was standing at the railing near the the inside of the railing. Mrs. Bell asked if the baby lions could be seen, saying that her boy was nearly crazy to see them. The superintendent said that he could not snow them, and started to pass on. In speaking of it afterwards he said the little fellow was so afterwards he said the little fellow was so nice and looked so disappointed that he determined to give him a peep through the cracks. Picking him up he walked to the cage and let him look through. The little fellow was all delight at getting a glimpse at the baby lions, and Mr. Mostler started to move around to the other side to give a better view. Being inside the railing he had to view. Being inside the railing he had to pass within two or three feet of Molly's cage, which was next to the one containing the Suddenly the lioness stretched out a paw between the bars and made a strike at the poy. The blow fell short out caught in his lothing. At the same time she attempted to drag him to her, and then for the first time Mr. Mostler saw the danger. Before he could move the little fellow had been pulled up to the enraged boast, and with a snap she seized one of his hands in her mouth. With one foot she braced herself and with the one foot sae braced herself and with the other she was just about to make a blow direct for the child's face. Mr. Mostler still held to the child and was pulling with all his might to get him from the animal. He threw one hand against the cage, This act probably saved the child's life. The attention of Molly was diverted, and she savagely clawed the man's hand. All this occurred in a few seconds and the horrified spectators had not had time to help in the battle. The mother was well-nigh crazed by the sight of her son in the clutches of the beast. The boy's hand was between the animal's teeth and his face was within an inch or two of the half open mouth when Molly turned to strike Mostler. The spectators then rushed to the cage, and with walking sticks, umbrellas and rocks beat upon the sides and head of the lioness. With a growl she released her hold of the child and turned to meet her enemies.

The almost distracted mother grasped her son in her arms and rushed to her carriage.

The boy was bleeding from his neck, side, and arm and his injuries appeared fatal, or at least, quite serious to all. The battle was won, but would the boy live! The excitement of the crowd was greater than ever as the carriage dashed off with mother and son to the office of Dr. Westmoreland. Here the wounds were examined and it was found that the boy was not fatally hurt. The wounds were quickly dressed and the injured boy was carried home. Soon afterwards Mr. Mostler went to the same office and had his hand dressed.

In speaking of the matter he said: "You don't know how relieved I felt. I had no idea of the extent of the boy's injuries and all the way to town I was wondering if he was dead. He was in my charge and I would gladly have taken every scratch he received. The little fellow was as brave as possible and never uttered a cry, even when his face was within four inches of the lion's teeth. I

The cause of Molly's rage seems to have been the removal of the lion from her cage Saturday morning. Then, too, of course, the presence of young ones always infuriates mothers of the cat family. It was learned afterwards that Molly had scratched the hand of the negro who did the feeding just a few minutes before.

WORLD FAIR SIGHTS.

Plans for Interesting Exhibits at the Great Exposition. CHICAGO OFFICE OF THE BEB,

CHICAGO, June 3. A reproduction of a section of the American desert, including cacti, sagebrush and Indians, will be one of the features of the world's fair. Four of the tribes which will be represented will be the Sioux, Zunis, Mokis and Navajos. In the desert will be located the tepees of the Sioux and the ogans of the Zunis and Mokis. While the Indians will have their peculiar houses in the desert they will be given space in the main government building for illustrating their methods of work and the things they manufacture.

The committee on foreign exhibits has recommended to the directory that $50,000 be expended in reproducing the ancient convent of La Ribida at Palos, Spain, as the building for the exhibition of relics of Columbus. It was at the door of this conventhat Columbus asked for food and shelter for himself and his child. It was here that he found an asylum for a few years while he de-veloped his plans and prepared the argu-ments which he submitted to the council at Salamanca. It was in one of the rooms of this convent that he met the Dominican monks in debate, and it was here also that he con ferred with Alonzo Pinzo, who afterwards commanded one of the vessels of his fleet. In this convent Columbus lived while he was making preparations for his voyage, and on the morning that he sailed from Palos he attended mass in the little chapel.
